Day Five – More Wilderness and a Rail Cart Adventure

Hike down a 17km paper road that was abandoned during the great depression in the 1930's. This is a great day to get your camera out for some stunning photos of some rugged New Zealand hill country. Then enjoy lunch at the most remote Country Hotel in New Zealand! Then go on a rail cart adventure and discover the Taranaki end of the abandoned Stratford Okahukura Railway Line. Learn about the line's rich history as the landscape slowly changes from gentle rolling plains to rugged hill-country.

Next we head further south to accommodation with a million dollar view of Mt Egmont. Here you will be able to see from a distance where you hiked on day three while you enjoy another home-cooked meal and a beverage while you relax and take in the beauty.

Day Six – Native Wildlife Reserves

Spend the morning hiking around a lake. The walkway meanders through some breathtaking lowland forest before heading deep into a swamp forest. You will see the great swamp forest giants (Kahikatea and pukatea) Spend time looking in the small streams feeding into the lake, you may spot some native New Zealand fish (banded kokopu) This wildlife sanctuary is a community-owned and community-driven project, and accommodates a wide variety of community interests including conservation and recreation.

Next a quick stop to see "Ratanui" a massive Rata native tree which is estimated to be between 500 and 1000 years old and is 43 meters in height and has a girth that exceeds 11 meters!

Tonight, stay in the wilderness, deep within the Whanganui National Park at a country lodge. Listen out when it gets dark, because you might just hear a Kiwi calling!

Day Seven – Jet Boat to a Historic place and Maori Hangi

Take a jetboat ride further inland to a walkway into the heart of the Whanganui National Park to see the Bridge to Nowhere! The bridge was constructed in the 1930's in anticipation of the forming roads but then abandoned in the great depression.

End your day in Rotorua with a Maori performance and traditional Maori Hangi (food cooked underground on hot stones) for dinner.
